VEILED PROPHET BALL

Unprecedented Gathering in the Merchants' Exchange Hall.

BRILLIANT COMPANY GREETS MYSTIC MONARCH AND HIS COURT.

As the great monarch of frolic, the | Cream lace robe over white satin; diamond Veiled Prophet, placed the coronet upon the head of Miss Stella Wade, Queen of Love and Beauty, at the twenty-seventh ennual ball at the Merchants' Exchange last night, the crowd of many thousands burst into enthusiastic applause, acclaiming it the most magnificent of all the functions with which the Prophet has honored

Never has such a body of St. Louis soclety gathered to do the Prophet honor. There was barely room for the passage of his Majesty and his retinue through the dense crowd which thronged the floor. With difficulty a way was cleared, and at times the Prophet was forced to stop and walt for the multitude to divide.

It was fifteen minutes of 11 o'clock when the fanfare of trumpets announced about to begin. Preceded by members of the Floor Committee, who cleared a passage way, the folly promotor of fun and frolle entered at the east entrance to the exchange floor. Behind him followed the First High Priest, the Second High Priest and the Grand Marshal, while in an alof peoples from every nation of the world,

The hall was decorated with the colors of the Prophet and those of the Louisiana | pink. Purobase Exposition. The purple and yellow and red of the Prophet, mingled with the white and yellow and red of the Exposition. Shields of the Exposition and of the State of Missouri were at each end of the hall, while directly opposite the throne were the flags of the Velled Prophet, the United States and the Exconttion, each studded thickly with electrie lights. Plage of almost every nation hung from the balcony. Proceeding in a circle around the ballroom floor, the Prophet halted before the throne, saluting Miss Chouteau, the re-After a few whispered words with his ty. Miss Stella Wade, was announced. The coronet was then placed on her head and she took her seat by the side of the Prophet. Miss Chouteau occupied a separate throne placed to the right.

The attendants of the uQeen were then hosen, as follows: Miss Margot Postiewaite, first maid of honor; Miss Jane Tempie, second maid of nonor, and allow each was given a coronet resembling the one worn by the Queen. Silver purses were given as favors to the remainder of the immediately after the selection of the Queen and her attendants, and their coronation, the Imperial Quartet was formed to dance the Velled Prophet's lancers. The Prophet danced with the Queen, the First High Priest with the first maid of honor, the Second High Priest with the second maid of bonor, and the Grand darshal with third maid of honor.

teau, who danced with the Prophet. Th members of the Prophet's retinue danced

In the large crowd, which filled the ballroom, were many foreigners and military dignitaries, now in St. Louis attending the World's Fair. Much of St. Louis and visiting society attended both the Velled Prophet's ball and the ball in honor of Governor and Mrs. Odell at the New York State building. It was the choice of many the Veiled Prophet's function later.

As it was, everyone had time to visit. both functions without inconvenience. The lateness of the Prophet's ball enabled the guests to arrive from the New York reception in time to be present at the entry of the Prophet. In fact, the greatest crush came just before the entry of the Prophet. as it was at this time that those who ha been , the Fair grounds began to arrive
